Rev Barbara K Peronteau
*A Trans Woman and Her Faith Journey

From famous celebrities coming out, to “bathroom bills’, to acceptance by institutions such as the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, transgender folks have been in the news a lot lately. Even though not one person has ever been molested in a bathroom by a trans person, conservative religious people and right wing politicians want to vilify us. Progressive people of faith and liberal politicians want to include, protect our civil rights, and welcome trans people. But what I have found, even among people who welcome us, is most people do not understand who we are. By weaving her story with the latest professional understandings, Rev. Peronteau will share her version of “Trans 101” so that you might have a better understanding of who trans people truly are.

Barbara graduated from Lynchburg College and from Union Theological Seminary in VA. She served several congregations and currently is an Interfaith Chaplain Resident at Reading Hospital. Barbara speaks widely about being transgender, her Christian faith, and the need for inclusion and equal rights for the LGBTQ community. The institution of the Transgender Day of Remembrance in Reading is an achievement she is most proud of. Recently Barbara was featured in a short video, entitled “The Girl Wants Out”, by the Berks Story Project.
