We, the Pennsylvania Southeast Conference of the United Church of Christ, trusting in God's saving grace; proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ, ministering in covenant with our local churches and associations; and reaching out in mission to the wider church and to the world; embody God's love by:

Encouraging our local churches toward new and renewed ministries; nurturing strong pastoral leadership while celebrating and developing the God-given talents of all members.

Strengthening the mission of our Conference; providing new opportunities for worship, Christian education, stewardship, evangelism and Christian witness while affirming our partnership with the whole United Church of Christ.

Preparing the way for God's reign; affirming the ecumenical unity and inclusiveness of Christ's Church; committing to the struggle for justice, mercy and peace while praying for the healing of all that separates us from God's love.

What is a Community of Practice?

Communities of practice are groups of people who share a concern or a passion for something they do and learn how to do it better as they interact regularly.

Three characteristics are crucial for a Community of Practice:

- THE DOMAIN: A community of practice is not merely a club of friends or a network of connections between people. It has an identity defined by a shared domain of interest. Membership therefore is a commitment to the domain, and therefore a shared competence that distinguishes members from other people.
- THE COMMUNITY: In pursuing their interest in their domain, members engage in joint activities and discussions, help each other, and share information. They build relationships that enable them to learn from each other. But members of a community of practice do not necessarily work together on a daily basis. The Impressionists, for instance, used to meet in cafes and studios to discuss the style of painting they were inventing together.
- THE PRACTICE: A community of practice is not merely a community of interest ~people who like certain kinds of movies, for instance. Members of a community of practice are practitioners. They develop a shared repertoire of resources: experiences, stories, tools, ways of addressing recurring problems, in short a shared practice. This takes time and sustained interaction.

It is the combination of these three elements that constitutes a community of practice. And it is by developing these three elements in parallel that one cultivates such a community.
