On the 50th anniversary of the assassination of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the National Council of Churches, National African American Clergy Network, Churches Uniting in Christ, and many other faith groups, have called for a national rally against racism.

This demonstration on the National Mall will kick off a multi-year effort to address racism in the areas of church life and practices, criminal, economic and social justice, civil and human rights, environmental justice, immigration, media, and education.

The Justice & Witness Team of the Penn Southeast Conference is organizing a bus for conference laity and clergy who want to participate in this faith-based march against racism.

Tips for the day!

Clergy are encouraged to wear clericals, robe, or stole, and laity are invited to wear any UCC or congregational – identifying gear. Participants must be 18 years or older unless accompanied by a parent or designated guardian. All participants from the PSEC will stay together in order to facilitate timely departure. We will be using the buddy-system at all times to ensure no one gets separated or lost.
