“Now what?”

Easter is the highlight of the church year with the best memory-making worship offering we can muster. When it's all over I can't help but ask, "Now what?" After the spiritual and emotional intensity of Holy Week-- the sorrow followed by the joy-- where do we go from here?

My cynical self knows we go back to the work of living-- of cleaning up the flowers, and straightening up the pews, and seeing the usual people on Sunday mornings. It's hard to not feel a little sad that every Sunday can't be like Easter. But my, what if it was? What if we came to church every Sunday to a similar experience of energy, joy and expectation; that on this Sunday and the next and everyone thereafter, our God of resurrection showed up in magnificent, life-changing ways? That would transform every Easter-only-visitor into an every Sunday attender.

Easter is a Son that never sets but true to the form of every mystery, it's hard to hang onto. It's always half-hidden to our hearts and so hard to sustain for very long. It took a while before the disciples stopped mistaking Jesus for a gardener. It took more than one visit to the tomb, more than one search of the garden, more than one good cry in the dark before they began to see. And in seeing, began to live the resurrection every day. It changed their lives-- the lives of the people around them and eventually, the world.

The resurrection will change us today, if only for moment. But sometimes those moments, strung together, are enough to change the world. May it be so for you and for me and the people we love for Christ is Risen. He is Risen indeed.

Easter Blessings,
Pastor Bill
