Be an Active Participant

The story of the origin of Jesus' birth is one that is told to us through a cast of characters. Each one of them is very different and each one brings a different perspective to the coming of our savior.

In my 48 trips around the sun, I have discovered that, depending on where I am spiritually any given year, I identify more with one of these characters. Sometimes I am Zachariah, hesitant to believe that God can do the impossible. Other times I am the shepherds, eager to see what new thing the Lord is doing. Oft times I am Joseph, doing my best to bridge what God is requiring of me and what society is expecting of me. Very infrequently I am Mary, trusting the hand of God even when I don't really understand how he is moving.

I pray as you move through this season that, like our cast of characters, you will be an active participant. Play your part in this Christmas narrative, because there is one part that is always played to perfection;

Jesus is coming for you and me!
